

2020 Time Capsule

A lot of people are talking about how this is a historic time, but you can make a time capsule whether your life feels momentous or boring. It's a great way to reflect on the present, and it'll be a fun surprise a year from now to see how you captured this moment.

To get started, you can cut up these prompts and write your answers on the back, or write the prompts + answers on your own sheets of paper.

a hope for this year

my biggest hopes for five years from now a change I want to make this year something on my middle school / high school bucket list my favorite thing to do outside of school what makes me laugh the most something I like at school people I love spending time with something I want to learn something great about me

What else could you include?

When you've got everything you want to include, pack it all up. This could be in anything from a beautifully decorated box to an old takeout container (though if you don't get out all the food residue you'll have a nasty surprise next year).

Seal it up, put it somewhere safe you'll remember (you can bury it if you're super hardcore!), and open it up in a year!
