Accapella Concert with QW4RTZ

Montreal-based QW4RTZ is a new acapella quartet that is making its name by sharing their passion for singing. Founded in 2010, the quartet now consists of Louis Alexandre Beauchemin, Philippe Courchesne Leboeuf, François 'Fa.2' Dubé and François Pothier Bouchard. They have a distinctive style, one that combines their classical background with a love of pop music, creating clever and original unaccompanied voice arrangements of the great standards of jazz, classical, and pop music. Their first album Acappella 101 was released in 2016 and was warmly received by critics. Presented in partnership with Conseil Communautaire du Grand Havre.

Reading & Discussion Series: Ideas in Science Fiction & Fantasy

The greatest SciFi and fantasy stories are driven by a compelling idea. SciFi's ability to imagine how things could be different makes the genre unique; but an idea is not a story. In fact, original ideas can make storytelling messy and complicated. Julian Mortimer Smith will discuss how the friction caused by the messy collision of ideas with stories is at the heart of the creative process. Local writers can submit pieces up to 1,500 words and be selected to share with the audience. For submission guidelines visit Hal-Con's website. In partnership with Hal-Con.

On Justice for All

Professor Kristie Dotson explores a notion of racial justice in the 21st century and what it means as a Black feminist to have "a vision of justice for all." Ultimately, she claims that we are not so constitutionally dissimilar, our ability to impact each other so small, nor our populations so homogeneous as to imagine that racial justice is not just another way of saying we need justice for all. Racial justice in any era may well translate into the demand that we work for the goal of creating "a place where no one is prey." Kristie Dotson is a professor in the Department of Philosophy and African American and African Studies at Michigan State University. Part of the Dalhousie Philosophy Department's Austin and Hempel Visiting Speakers series. In partnership with the Philosophy Department, Dalhousie University.

SMU Presents: Politics of the Environment with Hendricus Van Wilgenburg

In this course, we will examine Canadian and international environmental politics to identify public policymaking and implementation affecting the environment, at multiple geo-political levels. To understand who has jurisdiction over the environment in Canada, we will briefly review the constitutional foundations for developing and implementing environmental policy. We then evaluate international regimes on ozone, climate, species, whaling, forests, and hazardous waste in terms of cognitive impact, democratic legitimacy, and environmental justice. Course runs September 4 - December 4. University Classes for Everyone. Become a student for free; seek and share knowledge with other curious minds; pursue lifelong learning at the Library. In partnership with Saint Mary's University.

SMU Presents: Decolonize Canada? with Rylan Higgins

What does it mean to decolonize? Is it possible for Canada to decolonize? If so, what would that mean? These questions and others will be addressed through an interdisciplinary attempt to first define and unpack the concept of decolonization and then to engage in critical thinking about the implications of this powerful idea. Relevant overlapping concepts will include: colonization, resistance, reconciliation, reparations, social justice, and settler-indigenous relations. Students will reflect on colonial minds and actions, and their decolonized counterparts. Course runs September 5 - November 28. University Classes for Everyone. Become a student for free; seek and share knowledge with other curious minds; pursue lifelong learning at the Library. In partnership with Saint Mary's University.
