SUPERHERO BRICK WALL

by Disney Family

<https://family.disney.com/activity/superhero-brick-wall/>

What better way to show off super strength than to break through a (pretend) brick wall? Collect cardboard boxes and transform them into a brick facade with red and black paint, and a little imagination.

What You'll Need: Cardboard boxes, Tacky glue or hot glue, Red acrylic paint, Black acrylic paint, Paintbrushes, Newspaper or a large tarp to cover your workspace.

How To: Prepare your workspace with newspaper or a large tarp. If your boxes are flattened, assemble them with a fast-acting tacky glue or a hot glue gun. Use books to hold the box in place until the glue dries. Paint a coat of red over the front and sides of each box. Let dry. Once the red paint is dry, stack the boxes into a wall formation. Use black paint to draw bricks on the front of the boxes. Visualize the entire wall and connect the lines across from box to box. Let dry .

To play, stack the boxes up, and burst through the wall to save the day!

How to: Draw two ears, and head for Totoro. Cut along the line you drew to shape his head. Draw on his eyes, belly, whiskers, and nose. Color or paint. Let dry,. Use Totoro as a puppet, or to decorate a shelf.

DC FAN FAMILY BOOKMARKS

Put some excitement in any book with these free DC Comics printable bookmarks. Once they're colored in and cut out, our finest super heroes and arch villains will help save the place in all your reading material.

You just download them, color them in, and then cut them out. Here are a few suggestions:

- Print them on card stock, so they'll last longer and hold their shape better.
- If you don't have card stock -- or even if you do -- glue two of them together into a double-sided bookmark. It looks good coming and going.
- To keep your books' pages smudge-free, we suggest using ink markers on these (not crayons or colored pencils).
