

Date Submitted: 6/26/2020

Author: Kristen Dela Cruz, 25-34 years-old

“My mom used to say she never saw us kids till dinnertime. Since lockdown happened, we’ve seen each other thrice more than before: we meet at breakfast, lunch, snack time and dinner. We watch more movies and shows together; we talk more on the front steps while we soak in the sun from the safety of our driveway; and we try more new recipes than ever with what we can afford thanks to government assistance. While we miss seeing our friends, and going to work, we definitely are thankful for this "vacation", the longest my parents and I have ever taken since we started working full-time. But man, how we miss the library and the church and the restaurants!”